

NAVY STATES SEND TROOPS TO HONOR DEWEY.

SAMPSON'S FLAG OF PRECEDENCE IS LINGERING.

Howison Is Now the Ranking Rear-Admiral and Will Take the Places to Which the Other Had Been Assigned.

The Chicago Will Lead the Naval Division of the Parade, and Sampson Will Follow on the New York.

In the Land Parade the Commander of the South Atlantic Squadron Will Ride Ahead of Him of the North.

Fair winds, good weather, and a sequence of other favoring circumstances brought the cruiser Chicago into New York Harbor early yesterday—eight days before she was expected. She had completed a cruise of about 23,000 miles, had carried the American flag into many ports where for long the Stars and Stripes had been a stranger, and returned to New York in time to participate in the Dewey celebration and incidentally to make Rear Admiral Sampson lower the blue flag of seniority from the mast of the New York.

Until 7:08 A. M. yesterday, Rear Admiral Sampson was the highest ranking naval officer—next to the great Dewey—in this harbor. His ship was to have led the grand escort during the naval parade. He was to have ridden just behind Dewey, in the land parade, with President Guggenheimer of the Municipal Council. As the next in rank to Admiral Dewey, he was to have come in for a great share of the honors.

It was a great occasion for Admiral Sampson. He was with his fleet, and none could dispute the honors that were due to his rank. But out from the mists of Sandy Hook crept the Chicago, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Henry L. Howison. The Chicago boomed a welcome to the Olympia and the Olympia replied. The Chicago proceeded up the bay and was saluted loudly by the forts, being mistaken for the Olympia.

Off Stapleton, at the end of the long line of battle ships, she dropped anchor, and at that moment Rear Admiral Sampson lowered his blue flag and hoisted the United States flag with two white stars, indicating that he was no longer ranking officer of the fleet—for Howison's commission as rear admiral antedates that of Sampson.

When the news of the Chicago's arrival reached the Reception Committee in New York there was great consternation. They telephoned to the Navy Yard for help, and Commander Kelly came over and explained that Admiral Howison ranked Admiral Sampson and must be respected accordingly. Thereupon for two hours the committee worked and worried over the changes necessary in the programme.

They shifted Sampson from President Guggenheimer's carriage to that of President Woods, of the Board of Aldermen; Rear Admiral Philip will ride with St. Clair McKelway, General Miles with former Governor Morton, while former Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo, Richard Croker, General Howard, Carroll and Senator Dewey will ride together.

"I doubt if my men will participate in the land parade," said Admiral Howison yesterday, "as that would discourage the plans already perfected."

We left New York on April 18 and have visited many points along the South American and African coasts.

I called on Admiral Dewey this morning and was mighty glad to see him. Just before we sailed he was promoted to the Naval Academy. George Dewey was in my class, and he was distinguished for his sweetness of character. He was particularly refined and quick-witted, and his admiration of his classmates. Although somewhat slight of build, he had his share of the soldier's rights, and proved himself a plucky chap and a handy one with his fists.

I don't remember that he had more than one or two fights, but he never avoided one and he usually came out on top.

"I did not expect to arrive here in time to join in the celebration, but I am glad to contribute to it. There is no occasion for any embarrassment. I am not on my presence. I shall obey any intimation in my respect in regard to participation in the parade, and I am sure that is over I suppose the Chicago will go to the Brooklyn Navy Yard. My naval career is nearly over, as I retire on October 10."

A sad affair occurred on the Chicago yesterday. She was near Gibraltar. Nancy, the mascot goat, fell a part of red paint and died in spite of medical assistance. She was buried at sea by the sailors.

SANDWICH DIET FOR CITY OFFICIALS.
